On The Road Again

Just can't wait to get on the road again. The life we love is making weeds go away. And we can't wait to get on the road again.

The road is taking us to a stand of Climbing Cassia. This is another category 1 invasive plant on Florida's list.

Climbing Cassia is considered a large shrub that can climb to 13 feet tall and just as wide. With its rapid growth and size it displaces native trees and plants that compete for sunlight and nutrients to grow.

- This evergreen shrub with sparsely hairy stems, grow in a zigzag pattern.
- Green leaflets grow in pairs made up by 3-6 leaves
- Yellowish flowers appear on the branch tips in late fall and early winter.
- The fruit is a smooth, brown narrow pod about 5 inches long that contains several seeds.
- These shrubs can be found along canal banks and in tropical hammocks.

The Removal Team at Aquatic Weed Control takes out these invasive plants on a regular basis. It's best to get them while they are small, like in the photo, since they grow so fast.

On the road to success, we never ask, "Are we there yet?" Success is what we've gained along the journey over the last 25 years. On the road again and proud of it!
